Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a device for motor vehicles in which a friction brake unit is coupled to an internal combustion engine. The motor vehicle includes an alternator for feeding an electrical energy source into a vehicle battery. The friction brake unit includes a pre-loaded piston provided in a friction brake. The piston is movable in a radially outer direction in an elongated hole formed in a friction brake base. The elongated hole is closed in a radially inner position at which the friction brake unit is locked in a first position so that the friction brake unit is prevented from being applied to an axle shaft of the vehicle. 2. Description of the Related Art In a known device of this type, a friction brake unit is coupled to a drive axle of a motor vehicle by a snap ring engaging the friction brake unit. The friction brake unit is connected to the vehicle battery via an electric switch in order to ensure that a current is fed into the vehicle battery for actuating the friction brake unit. Since there is no electric connection for moving the piston in the friction brake unit, it is necessary to use a relatively 754eb5d184
