The feature which is described as a "kind of tutorial", is called "what's me?", and it's meant to be the "most gentle reminder" of the dangers of self-portrait photography. The feature works by looking at your username, and seeing what Google already knows about you. For example, if you've got a username of "cat_watcher" then it's highly likely that you are a cat person, and a google doodle that shows a cat. More interestingly, if you are good at poi (a type of gymnastics skill) or have a particular interest in "fortnite" (an extremely popular video game), then you are deemed to be either a "fortnite player" or "poi player". The question in the background is then asked: "Your interests seem very diverse. Do
